JULIUS CESAR. Scott Expatiates on the Roma

omfortably filled with an intelligent and attentive audience last evening, to listen to the lecture of Prof. W. Q. Scott, of Wooster, Ohio, on the subject of "Julius Cæsar and his times." Prof. Scott's conception of the great Roman genius evinces the fact that he has bestowed considerable of study and thought upon the subject. Although the speaker did not anatomize and shadow forth the spiritual portrait of his hero, and paint the circumstances which preceded and surrounded him, so graphically as a Carlyle, yet he succeeded in convincing his auditors that his theme was worthy of the occasion and worthily handled. In short the lecture was a panegyric of Cæser. That lotty character was described as possessing the natural genius which made him author, statesman, diplomatist and Emperor, and set him over the heads of men. He was all of these and more, without any special aim to be so. It was in him to be great and he could not be otherwise. And Cæsar did not employ his powers to attain a selfish end, but used them as a means to better the condition of affairs existing prior to ception of the great Roman genius evinc the fact that he has bestowed considerab a selfish end, but used them as a means to better the condition of his country and his people.

The condition of affairs existing prior to to the the advent of the first of the twelve Emperors was minutely described as showing the need of such a one as Cæsar when he came upon the stage. By the oligarchy (which is then existed, it had become a land where in the poor cried for bread and the noblicity clamored for luxury. Then followed a careful account of Cæsar's campaigns and battlee, his statesmanship and patriotism, which brought the people a triumphant rescue. Professor Scott regarded the Emperor as greater than either Alexander or Napoleon. He thought that the noble Roman had achieved much to open the way for Christianity, modern government, liberty, and the civil law. And no King, said he, is worthy to wear Cæsar's crown but He whose kingdom is not of this earth. "Render unto Cæsar the things that are God's." These were the words of the King of Kings, as he held an image of a Roman ruler in His hand.

Prof. Scott as a lecturer, speaks with grace, and exhibits considerable compass to voice, but not the most distinct caunciation. When he descends to the guiteral tone, which he very frequently does, many of his words are lost to those who are not close to him.

"On what account?"
"I am an inventor, sir."
"Who are you?"
"J. Edison Hershel, of Oshkosh."
"Don't know you. What have you invented?"
The young man looked around uneasily, and said:
"Are we alone!"
"We are, proceed."
Lowering his voice to the key of a stage whisper, he said:
"I am the inventor of the 'Lunascope.'"
"Luny what?"
"The 'Lunascope;' the most remarkable invention of the nineteenth century."
"What is it for?"
"Why, it is an Optical Reflectometer, whereby I can throw the term St. Jacobs Oll in scintilating letters across the isce of the moon."

A Frankfort, My., Physician Writes: Some months ago the daughter of one of our prominent clizens was pronounced a hopeless consumptive. She was very much reduced in flesh, terrible cough, her much reduced in fiesh, terrible cough, her life gradually wasting away. I recommended her to use "Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry," which she did. In a short time she was free from all cough and other symptoms, and is now resy and healthy. Price 25 cents and $1.00 a bottle, or six bottles for $5. The large size is the most economical. Prepared only by Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. Sold by druggists in Wheeling and elsewhere.

Prople will spend a great deal of money some times for a present, and yet will not get anything that is useful, acceptable or elegant. Would not a handsome silk dress or cashmere dress or tile like be suitable? The satin de Loin silk we are selling (think of it) at $1.25 per yard, would certainly be very acceptable. The other different lines of dress materials we offer are unsurpassed in beauty, and our prices so low as to be within the means of almost every one. Before spending your money foolishly stop in and see us. Maybe you can select iomething that is both useful and ornamental.

Mr. Wim. Cannon, of Athens, O., says: "It is with a great deal of astisfaction his I can report the success of your treatment in my case. I am now 58 years old, and many of these years I have been sulfering with piles. I like thousands of others have tried everything, but the knife and ligature, and all to no purpose. My piles came down and were intensely painful. They very often bled, and within rendered my life miserable. When I consulted you I had very little confidence in anything, but you gave such strong assumences of a cure that I concluded to pat myself in your hands, and the result is most, grafifying. In your operations I was cured and with no pain worthy at mention. I would say to all like unferers that they have a sure cure in your 'New Method.' I will answer with pleasure all inquiries. You can use this as you may deem best."
